KITH AND KIN

Makes no pretensions to being a literary gem. It is simply a collection of Genealogical data, collected and arranged by one who wishes to leave to posterity a few facts that those who may come after will see these "foot prints on the sand" and take heart in their efforts to ascertain something about those from whom they are descended.

Acknowledgement is here made to the following publications:

THE ORIGIN OF THE NAME DICKSON OR DIXON

THE origin of a surname is not always easily found. In very many cases the spelling has been twisted and distorted, caused by the persons writing or inscribing them and by the provincial or dialectic pronunciation, which accounts for many of the variations.

When surnames were brought into common use everyone could not read or write, and persons pronouncing their names could not write or read them even after they were written. Therefore, a person writing his name, or inscribing it, was not bound by any fixed rule of spelling proper names. This condition unfortunately prevails today. Is it any wonder, then, that an author of a genealogy finds thirty-two ways of spelling the name DIXON, and that many of these methods of spelling are in use even now. One author, B. Homer DIXON, in his book, "The Border and Riding Clans and a Short History of the Clan Dixon," published in Albany, New York, in 1888, gives the following, "In a Charter from King Robert Bruce about A. D. 1306 to Thomas DICKSON it occurs as Filius Ricardi (son of Richard) and the Charter is endorsed Carta Thomas fil Dick." We also quote from the same author as follows: "Nesbit in his Heraldry (Edinburgh, 1722) says 'The Dicksons are descended from one Richard Keith, said to be a son of the family of Keith's Earls Marshalls of Scotland,' and in proof thereof carry the chief of Keith Marischal. This Richard was commonly called Dick and the 'son' was styled after him. The affix of son in the Lowlands answering to the prefix Mac in the Highlands."

We cannot refrain from noting that, as a result of some provincial or dialectic peculiarity, the name of the author of this work, as well as the author from whom we have made quotations, differ in their spelling from the original Dickson and use the phonetic DIXON.

Humphrey OGLE, owned OGLE castle at time of the Conquest by William of Normandy, being conformed in his title by William following the conquest.

The name OGLE seems to warrant its Saxon origin and the family affords a rare instance of the descendants of a Saxon nobleman retaining influence and power under the Norman dynasty. (The OGLE Family of England, page 13.)

ORIGIN OF THE NAME CUMMINS OR CUMMINGS

In the absence of authentic history bearing on the origin of names we are dependent upon tradition, hence we find in the genealogy of the Cummings family, going back to Isaac CUMMINS, the original emigrant to the Colonies, the author tells us that tradition assigns his origin to the Red Cummins Clan of Scotland, which flourished from 1080 to 1330, a period of 250 years, when it declined. We will not go into the history of this Clan as we deem it unnecessary in the absence of any positive proof that Isaac CUMMINS descended from them, and in fact, we are dependent entirely upon tradition as to whence Isaac CUMMINS came, but the strongest evidence, traditional though it be, would indicate that he came from Ireland, and we believe he went to Ireland from Scotland.

A DECOMYNGS came with William the Conqueror in the eleventh century and it is supposed that he came from the town of DeComyng in France, near the Belgian border. To him is assigned the origin of the family in England and Scotland.

An eminent Italian genealogist has found the name of Communes as far back as the fourth century, in Lombardy, Northern Italy. This family undoubtedly went to Southern France and eventually settled the town of DeComyng, near the Belgian border in Northern France. Thus we would account for the name and for the origin of the family in England, Scotland and Ireland. The most distinguished of the French name was one Philip DECOMYNG who was the historian, born in 1445, and attained great eminence.

Unquestionably all of the name of CUMMINS or CUMMINGS, DECOMYNG, or otherwise, are identical in their origin and we believe originated in Lombardy. There are fifteen ways of spelling the name, the variations caused, we believe, by geographical and dialectic changes.

Regarding the origin of this family the author would call the attention of the reader to the following Table of Pedigree, compiled by William G. HILL, of Malden, Massachusetts, editor of a distinct line of Converse Genealogy, whose caution and thoroughness as an investigator give great weight to his conclusions, and is published in "Family History in the Line of Joseph CONVERSE of Bedford, Massachusetts, 1739-1828"—by J. J. Putnam, 1897.

RESIDENCE OF DEACON EDWARD CONVERS

Erected in Woburn, Massachusetts, in 1640.

EDWARD CONVERS, the eldest child of Christopher and Mary (HALFORD) CONVERS, was b. in Wakerly, Northamptonshire, England, January 30th, 1590. In the spring of 1630, with his second wife, Sarah, and three children, he sailed for New England with the Company of Governor John WINTHROP, and in July the party landed at Charlestown. In 1631 he was admitted a Freeman of the Massachusetts Bay Colony and he served as a Selectman from 1635 to 1640. In consideration of forty pounds per year rental, he received a Legislative Grant, in 1631, of a franchise for a ferry from Charlestown to Boston, on the site of the present Charles River Bridge. The enterprise was under his control for several years when he surrendered his rights for the benefit of Harvard College, owing to the friendly relations existing between himself and Rev. John HARVARD.

His name heads the list of Seven Commissioners appointed to settle the town of Woburn, a suburb of Charlestown, previously known as Charlestown Village. An act of incorporation was granted in 1642, which was perhaps the briefest on record: "Charlestown Village is called Woburn", and his name appears fourth on the list of the first thirteen inhabitants. He was for nineteen successive years on the Board of Selectmen, after the organization, in 1644, of the municipality. The Church was organized circa 1641 and Edward CONVERS was chosen one of the first Deacons, serving as such until his death. In 1660 he was Deputy to the General Court of Massachusetts.

In January, 1640 (O. S.), he completed the erection of his home, at a cost of $650.00, a reproduction of which is shown on the opposite page. It was the first residence constructed in Woburn, and its location was on Main Street. Its dimensions were thirty by thirty-five feet, conforming to the style of architecture of the time, presenting two stories in front and one in the rear, with nineteen windows and forty feet of glass. Here he lived the remainder of his life, dying on 10th August, 1663.

Equally historic with this house was the "Convers Mill", on the opposite side of the street, which was occupied by the descendants of Edward for several generations.
